

THE PROBLEM

Last-minute cancellations leave empty chairs, and filling them takes a lot of texting

How it works today

Note the opening in Square → scan the Google Sheet for a match → text someone from the salon phone → wait → try the next person.

Who was contacted?

Who said no?

How long have they been holding it?

What goes wrong

- It's easy to lose track on a busy day, and some openings stay empty.
- Texting everyone at once gets it filled faster, but led to two clients expecting the same Saturday haircut.

8–12

cancellations a week within
48 hours of the appointment

~3 in 10

of those openings get refilled
today

20–30 min

of back-and-forth for a hard-to-fill opening

5+ in 10

Your goal: refill at least half, without anyone repeatedly checking on it, and never double-book.

WHAT THE PROTOTYPE DOES

Add the opening once. It offers it to one person at a time and moves on by itself.

- 1 You add the opening: service, stylist, date, time.
- 2 The earliest-joined match gets a text: same service, free at that time, right stylist if they have a preference. It shows service, stylist, date, time and a reply-by time, with no price.
- 3 It's held just for them: 15 minutes for same-day openings, an adjustable window for next-day ones.
- 4 "Yes" books it. The client gets a confirmation, the front desk sees who accepted with the details, you add it to Square, and they leave the waitlist.
- 5 "No", no reply, or a failed text moves it to the next match automatically. It stops when the appointment is too close or no one is left, and marks the opening Not filled with the full history.

Juniper Salon Today's openings Waitlist Sign out

Today's openings

Each opening is offered to one matching client at a time, in waitlist order. It moves on by itself. Demo speed: reply windows run 60x faster.

TODAY

8:30 PM Haircut with Maya
Ana Ruiz is holding it · 14 s left Offering Hide details

WHO'S BEEN CONTACTED

● Ana Ruiz – Holding the offer · texted 7:55 PM · reply by 7:56 PM (14 s left)
► Text sent

UP NEXT, IN WAITLIST ORDER

1. Chloe Park
2. Rosa Chen

Skip Ana Ruiz Assign someone... Cancel this offer

8:45 PM Haircut with Maya
No eligible clients left on the waitlist · 2 contacted Not filled Details

Add an opening

Service
Haircut

Stylist
Maya

Date
10/05/2026

Time
09:00 PM

Start offering

Offer settings

Same-day openings are held for 15 minutes per person.

Next-day openings are held for

Front desk: Ana is holding the offer with a live countdown. Chloe and Rosa are next in line.

Everything you said you lose track of, in one place

You and Carla

- Who's holding it and how much time is left
- Who declined, didn't reply, or whose text failed
- Who's next, in waitlist order, and how it ended
- Skip, cancel, or assign someone yourself, inside a details view with a confirmation. Assigning asks you to check Square first.
- Change the next-day window and quiet hours yourself

Your clients

- A private link showing only their own offer, never other clients or their place in line
- One tap: "Yes, book it" or "No thanks"
- A late "yes" is told the offer has expired
- A "stop sending me offers" link. They can still answer the offer they have.
- No texts during quiet hours

Why it won't lose track

- Each opening runs as its own Temporal Workflow, so waits and progress survive a restart.
- A failed text is retried 3 times, marked failed, then skipped.
- Only one person can hold an opening, and no one can hold two at once.
- Every step is recorded and can be reviewed later.

Simulated, still to decide, and left out on purpose

SIMULATED IN THE PROTOTYPE

- Texts appear on screen instead of being sent. A number ending in 0000 shows what a failed text looks like.
- Square isn't connected. You update it as you do today, and the app reminds you.
- Google Sheet is replaced by a waitlist page with sample clients.
- Sign-in is one shared staff passcode.

PLACEHOLDERS FOR YOU TO SET

Same-day hold	15 min (your choice)
Next-day hold	2 hours
Quiet hours	9 PM - 8 AM
Stop offering	30 min before

All adjustable on the front-desk page, no technical help needed.

LEFT OUT, AS YOU ASKED

- Moving the accepted client's old appointment, or re-offering it
- Clients adding themselves to the waitlist (staff add them for now)
- Price in the text
- Tracking which staff member took an action

A PRACTICAL NEXT STEP

A two-week pilot, alongside Square

- 1 Pick your times: the next-day reply window and quiet hours (about five minutes).
- 2 Connect a real texting service using the salon's number, and replace the shared passcode with proper sign-ins.
- 3 Move the Google Sheet into the waitlist in one import, keeping each client's join date so the order is fair.
- 4 Run every cancellation within 48 hours through it for two weeks. Keep updating Square as you do today.

Measure

Openings refilled out of every 10 (today ~3, goal 5+), double-bookings (goal: zero), and time you and Carla spend texting.

Later, if the pilot works

- Connect Square, so a cancellation starts offers automatically and an accepted offer books itself.
- Let clients join the waitlist from a form you approve.